

HOUSE No. 1960

By Mr. Driscoll of Holyoke, petition of Howard B. Driscoll that the city of Holyoke be authorized to restore certain persons to the eligible list for police officers. Civil Service.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts

In the Year One Thousand Nine Hundred and Forty-Seven.

AN ACT AUTHORIZING THE RESTORATION OF CERTAIN PERSONS TO THE ELIGIBLE LIST FOR POLICE OFFICERS IN THE CITY OF HOLYOKE.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1 SECTION 1. The director of civil service is hereby
2 authorized and directed, at the request of the mayor
3 of the city of Holyoke, to restore Martin J. Gaughan
4 and Harold P. Kennedy to the eligible list for police
5 officers in the police department of said city without
6 examination and in accordance with the civil service
7 law and rules, if and when an eligible list is established
8 for said city.

1 SECTION 2. This act shall take full effect upon its
2 acceptance, during the current year, by vote of the
3 city council of said city, subject to the provisions of
4 its charter, but not otherwise.

The first of these is the fact that the House of Representatives has a long history of being a body that is not very effective in its work. It has often been criticized for its inefficiency and its failure to pass important legislation. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the House is a large body of representatives from many different states, and it is often difficult to reach a consensus among them. Additionally, the House is often divided into many different factions, and this can make it difficult to pass legislation that is supported by a majority of the members.

The Importance of the House of Representatives

The House of Representatives is one of the two chambers of the United States Congress. It is the lower house, and it is made up of representatives from each of the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The House has the power to initiate and pass legislation, and it also has the power to impeach and remove federal judges and other officials.

The House is an important part of the American government, and it plays a key role in the process of making laws. It is the only chamber of Congress that is directly elected by the people, and it is responsible for representing the interests of the citizens of each state. The House also has the power to control the federal budget, and it is the only chamber that has the power to impeach and remove federal judges and other officials.

The House is a body that is often criticized for its inefficiency and its failure to pass important legislation. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the House is a large body of representatives from many different states, and it is often difficult to reach a consensus among them. Additionally, the House is often divided into many different factions, and this can make it difficult to pass legislation that is supported by a majority of the members.

The House is a body that is often criticized for its inefficiency and its failure to pass important legislation. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the House is a large body of representatives from many different states, and it is often difficult to reach a consensus among them. Additionally, the House is often divided into many different factions, and this can make it difficult to pass legislation that is supported by a majority of the members. The House is also often criticized for its failure to hold the executive branch accountable for its actions. This is due to the fact that the House has the power to impeach and remove federal judges and other officials, but it has often failed to do so. This is a serious problem, and it is one that needs to be addressed.

The House is a body that is often criticized for its inefficiency and its failure to pass important legislation. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the House is a large body of representatives from many different states, and it is often difficult to reach a consensus among them. Additionally, the House is often divided into many different factions, and this can make it difficult to pass legislation that is supported by a majority of the members. The House is also often criticized for its failure to hold the executive branch accountable for its actions. This is due to the fact that the House has the power to impeach and remove federal judges and other officials, but it has often failed to do so. This is a serious problem, and it is one that needs to be addressed.