The Commission on Government

Report of the Commission on Government

The Commission on Government was organized in 1955 to study the structure and functions of the Federal Government. It was composed of representatives from various branches of the Government, including the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches. The Commission's report, published in 1957, provided a comprehensive analysis of the Government's structure and functions, and recommended various reforms to improve its efficiency and effectiveness. The report was a landmark document in the history of American government, and its recommendations have been widely discussed and debated. The Commission's work was a significant contribution to the ongoing process of government reform in the United States.
