Half-tones of Portraits, and Interiors from Elmer Chickering, the "Royal Photographer", 319 Kent Street, Boston, Mass.

The paper in this Souvenir is from the A. Storr & Bennett Co., Nos. 138 150, Federal Street, Boston, Mass.
The Legislature of 1905 began its career under very peculiar conditions. The change in administration had disturbed the existing order of things so materially that none had a very definite idea of what was coming next. There was a general expectation that, unless great care was taken, there would be so much friction generated between the Governor and the Legislature that there would be "a hot time in the old town" for the greater part of the time. But all such expectations fortunately proved groundless. Not for years has a Governor led a more peaceful and happy life in connection with the Legislature. And the same, both as to anticipation and realization, is true of the Governor and the Executive Council. It is true that by various resolutions in favor of freer trade relations with Canada, for the taking off of the duty on hides, and for Congressional regulation of the hours of labor, the Legislature went on record as favoring a more advanced position in these matters. But, as all recognized that any positive result on such matters must come from Congress, very little time was spent in debating these topics. The session was marked by the death of two ex-Governors, an ex-chaplain of the Senate, and a member of the House, a remarkable record of its nature; to which was added, June 16, the sudden death of still another member. Not since 1881 has there been so short a session, and a cause thereof may be found in the shortening of the time for introducing new business, and in the general consent to vote on measures rather than talk upon them, especially in the Senate which was not enlivened by a genuine "old-fashioned debate" during all the session. In this Souvenir will be found the portraits and biographical sketches of the men who brought about this remarkable session, who helped hail the ship of state on such an even keel. "And may they live long and prosper."

Yours truly,

A. M. Bridgman, Editor and Publisher.

HALL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
This hall has seen varied gatherings, but none of greater interest than that of April 17, 1861. On that day, the first volunteer company of the whole country, during the late War of the Rebellion, assembled here, chose its officers, received overcoats from the government and in an hour and a half from the time of assembling was on its way to the front. The story, in more detail, is as follows: In Cambridge, in 1860, had been formed a company of "Wide Awakes" to help elect President Lincoln. Hon. J. M. S. Williams, congressman from that district, promised them that if they would keep up their organization they could go to Washington to see Lincoln inaugurated. But the United States government forbade the assembling of such bodies at the national capital. During the dark days of February, 1861, several of the company agreed to volunteer if they were needed, and, on the 14th of February, several of them signed an agreement to that effect. First on the list was the name of John Kinneer, now first clerk of Sergeant-at-Arms. In the first week in March, he, with a few others, visited the State House and personally tendered their services to Governor Andrew. He advised them that there was no immediate need of their services and that they return to Cambridge, whence he would summon them if necessary. Then came the news of the breaking out of rebellion. They at once visited the State House, finding Governor and Council in session. Governor Andrew told them to return to Cambridge and that they would receive orders in an hour. They returned and the orders speedily reached them. Then, again, they hastened to the State House, many of their members leaving their work and throwing their tools into the street. Reaching the State House, they assembled in Doric Hall, ninety-seven of them. In a small adjoining room they chose officers, electing James Prentice Richardson, now of Texas, as captain. They first went to the Old Colony station, but were soon ordered to the "S. R. Spaulding," where they embarked for Fortress Monroe. They were first assigned to the Fifth regiment, but were soon transferred to the Third, becoming Company C. This was, with out doubt, the first volunteer company of the Rebellion. It is a matter of history that this prompt, loyal and general response of this company, in contrast with the scattering returns from more pretentious organizations, did much to encourage the State authorities and "the great war Governor."

In this hall lay in state the body of Charles Sumner, Sunday, March 15, 1874, where it was viewed by a multitude as vast as time would allow.

In this hall gathered the "Army of the Unemployed," February 20, 1894, whence they were removed by detachments of the district and Boston police, but without violence. They had just been addressed on the Capitol steps by Governor Greenhalge.

This view is taken from the main entrance and shows the statues of Washington and John A. Andrew in the distance.

VIEW FROM THE CUPOLA TO THE NORTH.
built in 1730, on the lot of Gov. John Winthrop, corner of Milk and Washington streets, and dedicated in April of the same year. On November 27, 1773, here was held the meeting at which it was resolved that the English tea should not be landed; and on December 16 here was held the meeting, with 7,000 people attending, before the pouring of the tea into Boston harbor by the Sons of Liberty, disguised as Mohawk Indians. Here Warren spoke in March, 1775, three months before he was killed at the battle of Bunker Hill. In the siege of Boston it was used as a riding-school by the British. Its external appearance has not been changed for 130 years. No religious services have been held here since 1872. Now occupied by a loan collection of Revolutionary and other relics, the admission fees going to the preservation fund.
FANEUIL HALL, DOCK SQUARE.

Built in 1763; dedicated, March 14, and completed the same month, on the site of an earlier one built in 1742 and burned on Jan. 13, 1761. Enlarged in 1805 to its present proportions. Rebuilt largely in 1899. The upper hall is the armory of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. Called also "The Cradle of Liberty."
DANIEL WEBSTER.

As one of the foremost, "Legislators" of Massachusetts (for he was once a member of the Massachusetts Senate) it is eminently proper to place here, close beside the "Old State House," this rare but peculiarly interesting picture of Daniel Webster beneath his favorite tree at his New Hampshire home.
THE OLD STATE HOUSE.

Built in 1748, on site of burned town hall, at the head of State Street, Boston.

In the foreground occurred the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770. Been used as State House, City Hall, and Post Office. British troops quartered here, 1768, and General Gage held council of war here before battle of Bunker Hill. Declaration of Independence read from balcony in view; from other end Washington reviewed procession in 1789. Here State Constitution planned and ratified. William Lloyd Garrison took refuge here from mob, October, 1835, it being then used for City Hall.
