The Committee on Education

Report on the Education of the Deaf

It is the duty of the Government to provide for the education of all its citizens, and this duty is especially imperative in the case of the deaf, who are often unable to acquire knowledge through the ordinary channels of instruction.

The deaf are a large and important class of our population, and it is the duty of the Government to provide for their education in the most effective manner possible.

The Committee on Education has the honor to report to the House of Representatives the results of its investigation into the condition of the deaf schools in the United States.

The report shows that the deaf schools in the United States are generally well equipped and well managed, and that the deaf are receiving a good education. However, there are still many deaf who are unable to receive an education, and it is the duty of the Government to provide for their education in the most effective manner possible.
