The dominant coastal processes are mapped closest to the shoreline. Other important coastal processes that influence local sediment transport are shown seaward of the dominant process. Where appropriate, the long-term direction of longshore sediment transport has been depicted with an arrow. Arrows indicate only the net direction of transport; arrow length does not indicate the relative magnitude of transport.