This reports presents figures on the geographical distribution of releasees from Massachusetts Correctional Institutions (MCI's) during 1973*. Its purpose is to provide guidance as to the appropriate geographical placement of Community Residential Centers and other community based pre-release and post-release services. Data was taken from computerized files, with figures for previous years taken from previously published reports.

In presenting information on the numbers of releasees returning to various geographical areas, we are faced with the problem that different individuals prefer to use different geographical units. Therefore the report is divided into two parts. The body discusses the geographical distribution of releasees in terms of the five major metropolitan areas of Massachusetts - Greater Boston, Greater Springfield, Greater Worcester, Greater New Bedford/Fall River, and Greater Lowell/Lawrence. Appendices present, by releasing institution, the numbers of releasees to each of the following geographical units: counties, Department of Mental Health regions, each "Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas" (Bureau of the Census areas), different size cities, and individual cities and towns.

Table I shows the number of releasees to various geographical areas of Massachusetts during 1973. The cities and towns included in each geographical area are defined on the map that is the last page of this report. Table I presents figures separately for persons paroled to the street, paroled to residential centers, and released on discharge or expiration.

* More precisely, the figures refer to the numbers of sentenced prisoners released from MCI's during 1973; excluded are persons released on civil commitments from MCI, Bridgewater.

There are several patterns in this table worth highlighting:

First, a large majority of releasees returned to the greater Boston area (61%). Most of these releasees (45% of the total) returned to Boston proper, with 7% returning to a strip of thirteen suburbs directly north of Boston, and 9% returning to other cities and towns within a fifteen mile radius of Boston. It is worth repeating here that a previous study* found that two-thirds of the Boston releasees

(excluding releasees to residential centers) return to a "core city" area consisting of the South End, Roxbury, North Dorchester, and South Dorchester.

Second, sizable numbers of releasees returned to each of the remaining four large metropolitan areas of Massachusetts. However, the total number of releasees to these four metropolitan areas (19%) was much smaller than the number released to the Greater Boston area (61%).

Third, a relatively small number of residents were released to areas outside these five metropolitan areas (14%). However, fully a third of the releasees returned to areas outside Greater Boston.

Fourth, while most of the need for residential centers is in the Boston area, such centers are concentrated in Boston to such an extent that there is a shortage of these facilities in the rest of the state. To focus just on post-release residential facilities, during 1973 one out of every two parolees to Boston was released to a residential center, while only one out of every seven parolees to other parts of the state was released to a residential center. If Boston State Pre-Release Center, as a facility that was pre-release throughout the year, were added then the picture would undoubtedly become even more unbalanced.

Table II describes the number of releasees returning to each of these areas from 1966 to 1973. The major point of the table is the striking consistency over these years in the percentage of releasees returning to each of these geographical areas. Thus, insofar as there is stability in the number of releasees each year, Correction and Parole can plan rather well the amount of need for community based programs in different areas of the state.
